

COVID-19 (Coronavirus) and the 2020 Air Carriers Purchasing Conference

The Air Carriers Purchasing Conference is carefully monitoring developments related to the ongoing COVID-19 (novel coronavirus) outbreak to understand its potential impact on our global aviation community and activities.

As a global aviation association, we exist to serve our industry and provide platforms and spaces for connection. For over sixty three years, the ACPC's annual conference has been a key deliverable of this ongoing commitment, and it plays a critical role in supporting our community, especially in challenging times.

Rest assured that the ACPC remains diligent in ensuring that the safety and security of our attendees remains the top priority. With that in mind, there are currently no plans for the ACPC to cancel or postpone this year's conference as result of COVID-19. As we move ahead with implementing plans for the 64th Annual Air Carriers Purchasing Conference, your 2020 Board of Directors, along with the planning committee, continue to place high importance on facilitating measures that will ensure optimal health and sanitary conditions for everyone onsite during the event.

In order to remain informed about the ongoing situation at both the global and local levels, we are monitoring and are in constant communication with our partner, the Hilton Anatole, as well as with local government and health authorities, to incorporate improved safety precautions as we plan for this year's conference.

Please stay in touch with us via our website as this situation evolves. We continue to enthusiastically look forward to seeing you in Dallas!
